2017 VINTAGE

The 2017 will be remembered for the frost that hit us late April. But it was not just the frost, the drought caused by the a very dry winter made it very difficult for the vines to recover .

The rest of the growing season was relatively trouble free apart from the ongoing draught condition leading up to a very early harvest in general.

Pingus it self was less hit by frost due to the wind machines we have installed since 2007 (another frost year) They made it possible to “safe” 76 % of a normal harvest . 19 barrels of normal 25 .

Flor de Pingus was much more hit . We have only been able to harvest around 47% of a normal harvest . Very tough to see .

Thank God the wines are very good . Both Flor and Pingus it self are wines very high in color , a powerfull attack but also with a lot of freshness due to the early harvest . The finishes are impressive and the wines are very long on the palate .

We could not be more happy with the quality of the wines but of course very sad that we have so few bottles .
